The Classical Journal

is the official organ of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South. The Association is organized for the purpose of encouraging the development of the study of the classics; to provide a means of intercommunication between teachers of the classics—whether in the secondary schools, in the colleges, or in the universities of the territory it covers; and generally to promote a unity of thought and action in the broad field of classical teaching. Membership in the Association is open to all teachers of the classics and to others interested in classical studies who reside in the territory covered by the Association. The membership fee is $2.00 per year, and members receive both the Classical Journal and Classical Philology without further expense.

The subscription price of the Classical Journal alone is $1.50 per year; of Classical Philology, $3.00 per year. The value of these journals to those interested in the classics, either as students or as teachers, cannot be measured by the cost of membership. The advantages involved in this offer should therefore appeal strongly to those who find themselves in this class.

Application for membership in the Association should be made to the Vice-President of the state in which the applicant resides (see list on page three of cover), or to the Secretary-Treasurer of the Association.
